

Attention Residents:

Anyone who had a tree or limb damage the overhead wires to their home may need to call an electrician to have the service repaired before National Grid will reconnect the overhead wires. Homeowners are responsible from the weatherhead (the overhead connection usually at your roof line) down to the electrical meter. When a tree or limb falls on your overhead wires it can cause damage to the connection to your home which needs a licensed electrician to make the necessary repairs before National Grid will reconnect you.
